We are entirely opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

are you serious - in California the state animal, the symbol on the flag is a grizzly bear which was hunted into extinction. Grizzly are an endangered and vital part of the ecosystem as well as to the vitality of the diversity of like in Montana, this country and the world. Killing just for the sake of killing should be against the law just like it is for humans. all life is precious and should not be taken for such a useless endeavor.

NO to grizzly bear hunting!

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Even though the grizzly bear is still protected by the ESA, the state of Montana is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed from the ESA. Trophy hunting of grizzly bears would be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America’s National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

I have seen grizzly bears in many of the National Parks. They are a majestic animal. Why would anyone want to kill them and take away from others the possibility of a sighting of a grizzly in its natural habitat. Do these hunters eat the bear meat? Or do they just make a once great creature into a rug?
Are there not more people that come to see them than to kill them? The state must consider whether it is wise to allow hunters to selfishly remove this animal and deny others a wilderness experience.
The bear is essential for the balance of any ecosystem of which it is a part.
It is beyond shameful that the hunting proposal is even being considered.

I feel as if it was just yesterday I was writing you on this same topic. Since when did Speciesism become the rule of the land?

Speciesism : the assumption of human superiority leading to the exploitation of animals.

EXTINCTION IS FOREVER : Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Speciesism is dangerous. Speciesism is unethical. Speciesism sets an inhumane precedence. I urge the State of Montana’s Grizzly Bear Advisory Council to opposed to the insane idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

Trophy hunting of bears serves no biological purpose as they struggle to survive in ever diminishing habitat and are also killed by speeding drivers. You would be well advised to seek implementation of wildlife-proof human trash containment throughout the state so that all wildlife species are not artificially drawn from the wilderness into urban areas, thus creating a conflict that usually ends in death of the wildlife for 'public safety' reasons.

Speak up for Grizzly Bears!
Tell the Montana Grizzly Bear Advisory Council: “No Trophy Hunting”

The grizzly bear is not only featured on Wilderness Watch’s logo, but the Great Bear is a quintessential symbol of Wilderness and wildness, especially in parts of the western United States and Alaska where the great bear still roams.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Even though the grizzly bear is still protected by the ESA, the state of Montana is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed from the ESA. Trophy hunting of grizzly bears would be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America’s National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

No Trophy Hunting please.
Grizzly bears are an important keystone species. I live in rural Montana, and as more people (usually from interstate) move into the area, they are putting up more and more wildlife unfriendly species, limiting the range of elk, deer, bear and other wild animals.
Commercial huckleberry pickers (often using overseas labor) denude whole areas of every berry, making foraging for bears harder and harder.
My point: we are making it harder for these beasts to make a living as it is. Please do not allow this purely ego-driven sport to continue, and keep Montana for Montanan's who love our countryside and our wildlife.

Please enter your comments for the Governor's Grizzly Bear Advisory Council:

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit.
Trophy hunting of grizzly bears should NOT be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America's National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.
If trophy hunting is allowed by the state of Montana, iconic Wilderness areas in Montana like the Bob Marshall, Great Bear, Scapegoat, Lee Metcalf, Absaroka-Beartooth, and Cabinet Mountains Wilderness would no longer be safe havens for the Grizzly Bear.
Conservation Congress and our members are entirely opposed to allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing them to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Time to become civilized and do the right thing? Stop killing animals, and focus on dealing with your own species!

The plan to restart trophy sport hunting of grizzlies is a bad one. Grizzlies are a slow-reproducing animals and doesn't it just make more dollars and sense to allow them to live as bear watching is one of the most popular activities for travelers who come from around the world, fueling a nature-based tourism economy in Greater Yellowstone worth more than $1 billion annually (yes, I realize that only 3% of Yellowstone is in Montana but there's always Glacier National Park too)?

There is something seriously wrong inside any person who sees killing and owning the body of any creature as a trophy as something to be proud of. So many are already extinct for this very reason. You have the power to prevent this from happening. Don't let the wildlife and the people down by siding with a few who crave killing.

Trophy Hunters are not true hunters. They are spoiled rich assassins. I grew up hunting with real hunters, stalked on our feet, didn't take shots over 150 yards. If we didn't get anything, that was OK. The old hunters had complete disdain for the trophy wimps. Please don't allow them in your state.

There is no reason to allow the slaughter of Grizzly Bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival. Every life is precious, including animals. Trophy hunters are the scum of the earth. Please do not give them what they want. Thank you.

I can't support trophy hunting, period.
As a youth I was introduced to hunting via the NRA which emphasized safety and sportsmanship and found that, even then I was in conflict with trophy hunting. I haven't changed, though the NRA and public opinion certainly has.
My concern today is preservation of both wildlands and wildlife out of fear that we will lose the treasures we have.

I am strongly opposed to the unconscionable idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. When you slaughter a mother bear, her cubs die a horrible slow death of abandonment to starvation. Why would anyone commit such an atrocity, and why would you consider it? Allowing trophy hunters to kill grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to any scientific finding in view of the need for allowing the this icon of American wildlife to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival. Don't allow the slaughter of these animals. Thank you for your attention.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Even though the grizzly bear is still protected by the ESA, the state of Montana is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed from the ESA. Trophy hunting of grizzly bears would be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America’s National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

Please do not allow trophy hunting for Grizzly Bears.

Bears are part of the necessary species that keeps the balance of all animals that exist. Without bears and those animals that are sustained by eliminating other animals that feed from forage in our public lands would essentially eliminate the ground cover that protects our earth and water. Bears are the protectors of our environment without them would unbalance the natural order of our environment.

Subsistence hunting is tradition, provides food and in some cases, provides a primary source of food for low income people. There is no purpose in trophy hunting other than to serve the egos of people who do it. It is immoral, especially when baiting or trapping is utilized. Barbaric!

I say “No Trophy Hunting” of our Grizzly Bears in Montana and across the United States.
Grizzly Bear species deserves to live life as the human species. Violence on the Grizzly Bear species including cubs by the human species encourages violence in our schools , workplace, homes , and streets. Compassion, empathy, and common sense to protect all species including Grizzly Bears and prohibit violence are important for the benefit of the greater ecosystem.

Killing iconic wildlife, especially animals protected by the ESA, is counterproductive. It has the ability to wipe out yet another species from our country. This is not 'bear control' it is an opportunity for people to feel 'big' by killing something bigger and better than themselves. It is ego-stoking. And it's destructive to the world.
Grizzlies have made some comeback because they've been protected, but they are not safe, clearly. The natural world is not the enemy. Human frailty, greed, power - these are the enemies.
Leave the grizzlies alone. They are part of a much large ecosystem. Removing them will break down that ecosystem to the detriment of far more than just themselves.

Grizzly bears are an important member of the ecosystem. Dangerous, yes, but so are we. The serve a place in reducing wounded, sick, or weak prey and increasing system health. The damage done economically by removing them is far greater than the damage they do to ranchers or property. We need to learn to live with grizzlies. There numbers are low. Let them live, and let the tourists take pictures.

With only 1,500 grizzly bear left in the lower 48, every one of them is a genetic treasure. Look at how slow their recovery to todays number was. I'm a hunter but hunting species with such a slow recovery rate and few in number is not ethical, is a slap in the face to our children and generations to come. And for what? To satisfy the wimps of a few millionaires that what to have a bear head on their walls.
For those reasons I ask the state of Montana not to allow grizzly bear hunting in the state. Grizzly bears are not only a Montana treasure, they are an American treasure that belong to all of us.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range.

Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Despite the undisputed conservation evidence for their need for continued protection status, even when the ESA officially de-lists them, the State of Montana is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed. Trophy hunting of grizzly bears would be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America’s National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.

If trophy hunting is allowed by the State of Montana, iconic Wilderness areas in Montana like the Bob Marshall, Great Bear, Scapegoat, Lee Metcalf, Absaroka-Beartooth, and Cabinet Mountains Wilderness would no longer be safe havens for the Great Bear.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

It is unconscionable that the State of Montana’s Grizzly Bear Advisory Council is even remotely considering permitting trophy hunting of ANY of its native wildlife.
Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

Humanity has the stewardship responsibility to preserve and protect the life of EVERY living being on this planet. It would behoove Montana’s Grizzly Bear Advisory Council to seriously and sincerely embrace this responsibility.

We are entirely opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival. Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live. Please do NOT allow trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Thanks

Please take steps to save the iconic grizzly bear. The grizzly bear is a symbol of Montana wild spaces and one of the reasons tourists visit Montana. I visit Montana for the wild spaces, including National Parks, but other good outdoor recreation spaces also. I also hope for glimpses of wildlife. Please take into account that revenue comes into Montana via tourists visiting the great outdoors, and looking for views of wildlife.

Grizzly Bears must be protected. Our public lands belong to all of us, and no hunting of these majestic animals should be allowed on them. We have the opportunity and the obligation to be good stewards of our open lands and the wildlife that inhabits them. It is our moral duty to protect these animals, that once roamed broad swaths of the United States and that are now relegated to much smaller areas. Thank you.

I'm against trophy hunting of all kinds because the animal is usually in a "canned hunt" situation where it has no chance of survival. Paying a large sum of money for the "thrill" of the hunt to bag an animal whose head does not belong in a trophy wall—Where's the "sport" in that? Too bad animals can't bag a man for their walls....,, Grizzly Bears, like other heralded species of animals, have been a symbol of our great country, the strength of our country, and protecting them has symbolized the values of our county and it's history since the beginning of time, so much longer than any of us including the indigenous have even been in this area. How, in good conscience can we have the right to use them as sport and trophies, to abuse their right to exist along side our species in this part of the world we call America? They are an attraction for the state, the wilderness they call home is an attraction for the state. Self-defense aside, is there a reason other than personal greed that allowing the killing these magnificent creatures is even a possibility? Protect the ancient treasures you have as they cannot be replaced.

Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

It' also not necessary. Hunters should have something better to do with their time than kill.

Please enter your comments for the Governor's Grizzly Bear Advisory Council:

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Even though the grizzly bear is still protected by the ESA, the state of Montana is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed from the ESA. Trophy hunting of grizzly bears would be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America’s National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

Now is your chance to raise your voice for grizzly bears and tell the State of Montana’s Grizzly Bear Advisory Council that you are entirely opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

Do not open grizzly bear hunting. Here is why.

1. Trophy hunting needs to STOP COMPLETELY. We need to restore populations of ALL species that are in trouble if we want to have any of them in the future. If someone wants to hunt grizzly bears in the future and there aren't any, that is our fault and how selfish are we?
2. People who trophy hunt tend to cheat and do things like "bear bating" where they kill another animal, defenseless against a high powered rifle, and leave it for the bear to come and eat, then kill the bear. I know this happens from direct experience from people I knew who had a lodge in Canada. People cheat and are cheating even more now, so this does not need to be encouraged, again if we want to have anything left. Also bating bears outside of protected areas happens. This is not right and again should not be encouraged.
3. There are too many human beings on the planet putting pressure on the habitat for all species. We all have to eat, drink and breathe to live so it is even more important we protect what we have left in both whole ecosystems and species of plants and animals that support them because they support us. We must learn to control ourselves, again if we want to have anything left for the future. All these people who want to kill for a trophy are selfish. What would they do if there were no more bears to kill? They would kill something else probably, but these people are destroying the very thing they want to do for "sport".
4. If you want to hunt and kill an animal, it needs to be strictly limited with permits monitored closely such as -hunting can only be done with a guide who works for the state, for example, and the meat needs to be used. We must change our attitudes now because it is not the 1800's anymore. It would also create some jobs for people who are licensed by the state to accompany those who want to hunt.
5. How "sporting" is it to kill an animal with a high powered rifle from a great distance anyway? I someone wants to be outdoors and wants sport, tracking the animal and then leaving it alone is far more challenging and sporting it seems to me. People can take a picture and put it on their wall. What are they really going to do with a dead animal after they have killed it? Nothing except brag to whoever will listen and it is not worth the death of another living creature for bragging. Who are we really? Are we going to promote selfish destructive actions or can we do better and look out for the greater good that will ultimately sustain us all? It is our choice.

I am asking you please not to allow trophy hunting of grizzly bears anywhere in the state of Montana. The bears' low reproductive rate means that trophy hunting could greatly reduce bear numbers and that they would not recover - and would probably decline again - should trophy hunting then continue.

Killing Grizzly Bears OR any animal just for the sake of killing or mounting as trophy is cruel and despicable. I have personally seen in action how people act when there is a legal bear hunt, killing mother bears, dragging cubs These actions are worst than any animal action and we are suppose to have brains! Please reconsider this and do not cave to a few people with $$

The Grizzly bear is a magnificent animal and its survival in the wilderness should be encouraged not eliminated.

These animals contribute significantly to shaping the environment and creating successful habitat conditions for many animals not just Grizzlies.

in conclusion I am entirely opposed to the trophy hunting of these animals.

Grizzly bear hunting should not be allowed for the following reasons: 1. this animal being a top predator is few in numbers, and removals can have significant population and social impacts to this species. 2. the available habitat for this animal is extremely limited in size and scope, especially given the existing human habitat intrusions such as hiking trails, campgrounds, roads, powerlines, gaslines, housing and business facilities that fragment its' habitat. 3.Rather than focusing on hunting this animal, the council should focus on limiting or preventing new habitat intrusions and consider removing existing habitat intrusions. Habitat loss and intrusions are directly negatively affecting the long term survival of this species. You job should focus on promoting positive outcomes for this species. Thank-you for the opportunity to comment on this proposal.

Please enter your comments for the Governor's Grizzly Bear Advisory Council:

The Grizzly Bear is a quintessential symbol of wilderness and wildness, especially in parts of the western United States and Alaska where the great bear still roams. The Grizzly also adds to the allure for tourists, and lovers of nature to these areas, bringing economic benefits to the areas.

In 1975 grizzlies were protected under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). Although there has been some progress to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range, according to information I have read. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by vehicles, hunters who claim self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management tactics. I have learned that in the last two years, there have been record-breaking grizzly bear deaths in Montana.

Even though the grizzly bear is still protected by the ESA, the state of Montana is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed from the ESA. Trophy hunting of grizzly bears would be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America’s National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks. This is unconscionable.

If trophy hunting were allowed by the state of Montana, iconic wilderness areas in Montana like the Bob Marshall, Great Bear, Scapegoat, Lee Metcalf, Absaroka-Beartooth, and Cabinet Mountains Wilderness would no longer be safe havens for the Grizzly.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live, just like wolves; the story of the reintroduction of wolves to Yellowstone is indicative of the importance of these keystone species. Grizzly bear numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

I am entirely opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within wilderness areas, runs contrary to the ESA's plan to increase grizzly bear numbers and allow the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

A species that has been extirpated from much of its range and is threatened by human growth/habitat loss and climate change should not be hunted. Period. You are lucky to have a large carnivore in this state, with all the ecological services they can provide. Learn to live with them, not shoot them.

I am vehemently opposed to the decision to open the slaughter of the grizzly to "trophy" hunters and ask that you not favor their wants over this iconic keystone species.

Not against hunting. But trophy hunting grizzly bears is just plain stupid. Grizzlies have a legitimate place in the Montana ecosystem. Perhaps their numbers need to be 'controlled' by hunting. I doubt it. But satisfying the blood lust of killers is not the way to go about that. Make Montana great; find a way to have grizzlies in it.

Do not permit grizzly bear hunting. They haven't even remotely recovered yet and are still endangered. Hunting grizzly bears is nothing but disgusting blood-sport trophy hunting.

How is this even hunting? Someone goes out with a high powered semiautomatic gun with a scope and fellow hunters to corner a bear and execute it. That's not hunting, that's murder. Where's the sport in that? You could call it hunting if those brave powerful "hunters" had to kill with spears but we know those big brave men & women would never do anything like that, don't we? Killing a creature for a trophy is something you would expect from a pathetic, small minded person who needs to prove his or her power.

We are here to do whatever it takes to save and protect these grizzly bears now and we will. We are here to ban all hunting of grizzly bears now and we will. We won't let this go anytime soon now and we won't. We don't give up that easily now and we won't. These grizzly bears will be left alone now and they will. We are looking into this farther now and we will. We are here to ban all trophy hunting now and we will. If you so called people think this will go away anytime soon now think again because it won't now or ever. We are not joking about this now and we won't. We are here to find out why this is still going on now and we will. If this continues like this it will be a much bigger issue and problem and that will not be good or smart at all. This will not go unnoticed now and it won't. We are here to make sure nothing happens to these grizzly bears now or ever. How much more real does this need to get now? We will be watching very closely from now on and we will. We are here to make sure all bears will be protected from poachers and hunters from now on and we will. We are here to make sure their habitats are protected as well and we will. This is not over yet! We are here to get answers now and we will. We are here for the real truth now and we will. These grizzly bears are not going anywhere anytime soon now or ever. We are here to keep the pressure on for as long as it takes now and we will. We will continue to get to the bottom of this now and we will. No more bear hunting now. No more trophy hunting allowed because it is getting to be a problem now. Not enough is being done to protect the endangered species now and we want to know why and we will. We will keep fighting for all animals now and we will. Wildlife keep losing their homes and we want to know why and we will. Wildlife need to be left alone along with their habitats now. No more building allowed. No trees will be cut down now. Birds and wildlife need places to live. Forests are being destroyed and we want to know why and we will. We are here for the grizzly bears now. We are not going anywhere anytime soon now or ever. We are here for the long haul now and we will be. We will continue to speak out against abuse cruelty and torture to all animals now and we will.

I'm not a big fan of predatory animals like the Grizzly, however, they hunt out of instinct to survive and to feed their young so they too can survive. This is about their natural cycle to survive as wild animals. Modern man's hunting instinct has little to do with their own survival and is purely for selfish means and the idea of the hunt only serves to prove they are the dominant species. Like those who have a need to own a large truck or a sports car only proves that they are deficient in some area of their life that needs compensating to prove they are the dominant species. Hunting should be done out of respect for the animal as the indigenous tribes had done back centuries ago and only when their is a need to survive at a harsh time or place. Please respect our wildlife and don't hunt for game. Thank you.

Trophy hunting hardly brings out what is best about humanity. Animals being killed solely for fun and to boast about, rather than as needed sustenance, doesn't say much about our ability to empathize with conservation of a species as a whole, or the critical need to understand our role in saving the planet for ourselves and our descendants. Grizzlies reproduce slowly, and the health of their species is a reflection on the environmental cycle of life that humans share with all the other species on earth.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Even though the grizzly bear is still protected by the ESA, the state of Montana is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed from the ESA. Trophy hunting of grizzly bears would be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America’s National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

I am a scientist and naturalist. I am fully aware of the high importance of keystone species. Without them, entire ecosystems collapse. I'm certain that you are aware of how that has been experienced in Yellowstone.

The grizzly bear is one such keystone species, and that alone should be reason enough to protect them.

Further, though, I understand that there are only about 1500 of them in the lower 48 -- that is a perilously low number! That certainly is the reason they have been protected by the endangered species act.

Considering their quite limited existing range and their low reproductive rate, it would be folly to allow hunting of them.

I was fortunate to see three different grizzlies during my last visit to Glacier National Park. I hate to think that I would not see another one on future visits to parks.

PLEASE do not allow hunting of the grizzly!

No Trophy Hunting!

The grizzly bear is a quintessential symbol of Wilderness and wildness, especially in parts of the western United States and Alaska where the great bear still roams.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states -- found within less than two percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions and other heavy-handed management. The last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Even though the grizzly bear is still protected by the ESA, the state of Montana is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed from the ESA. Trophy hunting of grizzly bears would be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America’s National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.

If trophy hunting is allowed by the state of Montana, iconic wilderness areas in Montana like the Bob Marshall, Great Bear, Scapegoat, Lee Metcalf, Absaroka-Beartooth and Cabinet Mountains Wilderness would no longer be safe havens for grizzlies.

Grizzlies are a keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

It is on this basis that I am entirely opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. If trophy hunters kill grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, this would run contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

Thank you for considering my comments on behalf of this still imperiled species.

I am very much against trophy hunting especially now when so many animal species are endangered. Why should we give up our iconic wild life so some jerk can have a bear skin rug or hang a head over his mantel.

We deplore the hunting and killing of Grizzly bears for many reasons and especially hate the cowardice of hunters who stay far away and kill them from a safe distance. If I could I would travel to Montana to hunt down and destroy these murdering imbeciles who just kill for "fun". One grizzly is worth 100,000 hunters, in my opinion.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

Dear Governor and Team,

Thank you for allowing the public to offer input. I am entirely opposed to the trophy hunting of grizzly bears. The main reason I oppose it is that grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not a human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears runs counter to the goal of increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the grizzly population to recover and reoccupy critical habitat.

Thank you for your time and attention.

Best,
Georgia Gelmis

Several grizzly are killed yearly from human contact already, their food sources are scarce and a female grizzly takes 5 years to mature and have a cub(s). Protect these beautiful animals humans continue to take over wild habitat...leave it for the wild animals...this planet is not just for humans it is for animals also...keep it wild and keep the animals free...hunters need to leave the bears alone.....Its national Earth Day...the Earth is to be shared by all. Please, no trophy hunting of grizzly bears!
Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

I am writing to urge you not to allow trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

The Greed of this Administration and the total lack of respect for OUR Environment is astounding!

American Citizens deserve better and OUR voices need to be heard above the destructive nature of Greedy Corporations and rampant Ignorance.

We ALL need to protect these extraordinary places and ALL WILDLIFE who inhabit these places, in order to remain connected to this earth, it is not only about the salvation of the planet, but it is also about the salvation of ourselves.

Save the Endangered Species Act!!!
SAVE the Grizzlies!!!

As a tax payer and citizen of these United States of America, I say NO TROPHY HUNTING of the iconic grizzly bear in "our" public lands.

Even though the grizzly bear is still protected by the ESA, the state of Montana is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed from the ESA. Trophy hunting of grizzly bears would be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America's National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

Sincerely,

Hunting endangered species is not sport...it is pointless killing and for what ? To hang a head on a wall ? Disgusting ! I have had the privilege of seeing a grizzly grazing on roots peacefully in Yellowstone. The poor bears were killed down to nearly the last one in the last century. We owe it to them to let them live in peace. They are GOD's creatures put here to be part of the healthy predator / prey ecosystem GOD designed. We are terrible about playing GOD and should stop pretending that we know what we are doing. The environment is already under great stress from rising temps and its effects on trees / beetles / moths / salmon etc. It is NOT sport...it is selfish, destructive, mean-spirited unmanly behavior. There is no fair fight between an innocent, voiceless animal and a high-powered rifle !

The world needs more bears, not greedy hunters who have no balls. No grizzly bear hunts, enough killing nature, start protecting and adding to the natural balance, not shooting it.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

I am entirely opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

Please enter your comments for the Governor's Grizzly Bear Advisory Council:

The Great Bear is a quintessential symbol of Wilderness and wildness, especially in parts of the western United States and Alaska where the great bear still roams.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.
Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.
Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

You have the power to ensure that the Great Bear doesn't become an abstract history lesson when teaching about extinction.

Please do not promote or allow trophy hunting of grizzly bears if they are delisted. Montana will again have a big black eye across the nation, and deserve it, if we allow the great bears to be hunted down on our public lands. With climate change, we are about to go over a cliff where biodiversity will crash for many species, and the big megafauna will be the first to go. The trophic cascade in which all species are interdependent will doom grizzlies already, as their food sources are depleted. We need to be cautious in this time, and follow the newest and best available science. A recent publication in Nature forecasts the crash of species biodiversity and we should heed the warnings.
Thank you.

I am entirely opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

De-listing the grizzly bear from the endangered species act would be a big mistake. No trophy or other hunters should be allowed to kill them. the bear is the symbol of our California flag. This animal should be respected and not killed.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.
If trophy hunting was allowed by the state of Montana, iconic Wilderness areas in Montana like the Bob Marshall, Great Bear, Scapegoat, Lee Metcalf, Absaroka-Beartooth, and Cabinet Mountains Wilderness would no longer be safe havens for the Great Bear. Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

Please reconsider allowing any trophy hunting of wild animals. This is the 21st century and the U.S.A. is not a third world country that needs its citizens to hunt for food. But if hunting for sustenance is necessary, then that person or family should be allowed. But hunting for trophy, Today, is unsportsmanlike, embarrassing to the rest of modern civilization, and just not cool. Please reconsider. Thank you so much.

I'm appalled to hear that the Advisory Council is contemplating lifting protections for Grizzly Bears in order to allow trophy hunting. Grizzlies already have low birth rates and environmental pressures to deal with. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the bears to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival. These lands are a public trust, something all Americans should be able to enjoy. Trophy hunters are a tiny minority, so to sacrifice these magnificent animals and endanger these ecosystems just for them would be a violation of the rights of all taxpayers.

I hope you decide against allowing trophy hunting. Thank you for your time,
Nina Berry

The grizzly bear (Great Bear) is a quintessential symbol of Wilderness and wildness, especially in parts of the western United States and Alaska where the great bear still roams.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

I am gravely concerned to learn that, while the grizzly bear is still protected by the ESA, the state of Montana is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed from the ESA, including on public lands, wild lands within America’s National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

I am entirely opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

Thank you for allowing me the opportunity to speak out against this, and I hope you will carefully consider my objections.

Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

If trophy hunting were allowed by the state of Montana, iconic Wilderness areas in Montana like the Bob Marshall, Great Bear, Scapegoat, Lee Metcalf, Absaroka-Beartooth, and Cabinet Mountains Wilderness would no longer be safe havens for the Great Bear.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

I am very opposed to Montana allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

Please protect grizzly bears and Wilderness in Montana.

I could say much more. I could reference good scientific information about numbers of Grizzlies necessary to maintain a strong genetics. Would be more than happy to do so, if needed, but I am going to trust that you have independent scientists, which means scientists not employed by government agencies, who are already well qualified to provide not only the raw science but to interpret for the advisory council members without sufficient expertise to interpret the raw data.

And, in addition to what the science says: Grizzly Bears represent better than any other creature, the power and majesty of Montana. To allow trophy hunting, for that is what it would be, is to desecrate the sacred. Please do not do this to us all. Please do not in our name go the way of Idaho and Wyoming. We protect the Grizzly here in Montana.

Grizzlies are considered a keystone species which means that many other species depend on the grizzly for their habitat. These include many plants who the bears plant randomly by their scat and small animals who use the holes dug by the bears for shelter. They are vulnerable mainly due to there slow and low reproductive rate which means they don't rebound quickly if numbers drop quickly.

OUR FAMILY IS SPEAKING UP FOR GRIZZLY BEARS!
WE ARE TELLING THE "MONTANA GRIZZLY BEAR ADVISORY COUNCIL": “NO TROPHY HUNTING!

The grizzly bear is not only featured on "Wilderness Watch"’s logo, but the "Great Bear" is a quintessential symbol of "Wilderness" and wildness, especially in parts of the western United States, and, Alaska, where the great bear still roams!

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so, in 1975 they were listed for protection under the "Endangered Species Act" ("ESA")! While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today, there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states, and, they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range!

In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana!

Even though the grizzly bear is still protected by the "ESA", the state of Montana is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed from the "ESA'! Trophy hunting of grizzly bears would be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America’s "National Wilderness Preservation System" and, wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone, and, Glacier, National Parks!

If trophy hunting were allowed by the state of Montana, iconic "Wilderness" areas in Montana like the "Bob Marshall", "Great Bear","Scapegoat", "Lee Metcalf", "Absaroka-"Bear tooth", and, "Cabinet Mountains Wilderness" would no longer be safe havens for the "Great Bear"!

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live! Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit! Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live!

Now is our chance to raise our voices for grizzly bears and, tell the "State of Montana’s Grizzly Bear Advisory Council" that my family and I are entirely, and, strongly, opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears!

Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within "Wilderness" areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers, and, allowing the "Great Bear" to recover, and, reoccupy, critical habitat essential for their survival!

I am very saddened and upset hearing that you are considering trophy hunting of Grizzlies once they become delisted from ESA and I implore you to NOT allow trophy hunting.

Grizzly populations are no where near where they used to be, 1500 in the lower 48 can hardly be considered recovered. Personally the entire idea of humans hunt another species just for fun and to hang them on their walls to show off to others is foreign to me, and seems pointless. What exactly is achieved by trophy hunting, bragging rights? Many people would love to see one in real life in their habitat and pay to be able to go out with someone experienced to try to see one, that would be an experience one would never forget. Regardless of how I feel about trophy hunting, Grizzly bears I have done some research and Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

I am entirely opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival, unless your goal is to make them once again become extinct in your state.

I appreciate your time reading and listening to my thoughts and opposition.

Sincerely,
A. Young

Hi!

Grizzly Bears are important members of the forest ecosystem. First of all, they are important predators and help keep deer, coyote, and especially wild boar populations in check. Second, by doing so, they cut back on loss of forest flora by deer, thereby improving the watersheds, both for animas and humans. Retaining moisture inside the forests ultimately reduces fire risks as well.

Personally, I have only seen grizzlies from afar and I'd like to keep it that way, since they are bigger, badder, and more powerful than I. Still, as a top of food chain predator, only good things can happen by protecting them.

I cannot imagine the natural world in the United States without the grizzly bear. It is one of our iconic species and a key ingredient of what wilderness areas we still are fortunate to have. after several centuries of destruction by igonorant settlers and governants. We know better now and must do everything we can to protect the fantastic wildlife inheritance we have been blessed with. The grizzly is part of an intricate ecosystem in which all parts must be protected because they fit together like a jig saw puzzle.Each part is critical. We should know that by now, in 2020, the 50th anniversary of Earth Day.

Please do not allow trophy hunting of Grizzly Bear. It is far from safely having emerged from an endangered species and should be allowed to naturally and gradually expand its range.

I am completely opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

Thank you.

Speak up for Grizzly Bears!

The grizzly bear is not only featured on Wilderness Watch’s logo, but the Great Bear is a quintessential symbol of Wilderness and wildness, especially in parts of the western United States and Alaska where the great bear still roams.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Even though the grizzly bear is still protected by the ESA, the state of Montana is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed from the ESA. Trophy hunting of grizzly bears would be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America’s National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

As you know, Grizzly Bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Even though the grizzly bear is still protected by the ESA, your agency is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed from the ESA. Trophy hunting of grizzly bears would be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America’s National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.

If trophy hunting is allowed by the state of Montana, iconic Wilderness areas in Montana like the Bob Marshall, Great Bear, Scapegoat, Lee Metcalf, Absaroka-Beartooth, and Cabinet Mountains Wilderness would no longer be safe havens for the Great Bear.

Grizzlies are keystone and 100% necessary species that help shape and uphold the health and viability of the entire ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers MUST fluctuate according to habitat conditions, and not some human-conceived artificial population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places and people in which they live.

After being lucky enough to view some of these bears from the edge of a boat, I am entirely opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

HUNTING GRIZZLY BEARS!!??? You are Kidding, right? Why should humans be killing any animals at all except for food? Where is the respect for Wild Life? This is not the day of frontier folks needing to hunt for sustenance. Wild Life is beautiful, in the wild, alive, not as a trophy on someone's wall. That someone is not a lover of Wild Life. He is a lover of a false sense of power (though a rifle against wild life is hardly an indication of power; the playing field level is totally unfair to the wild life).

Can we just stop with with the damned trophy hunting already, because that's all this is? Grizzly bears are already under severe enough threats from automobile/train collisions, inadvertent man-bear encounters resulting in bears being put down, and the isolation of southern and northern populations from each other (gene pools unable to mix sufficiently to prevent inbreeding). And don't get me started on the DOL and the livestock industry and all of it's crying. Pay them for their livestock losses and be done with that nonsense.

I am adamantly opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Permitting trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within public Wilderness areas, is contrary to the long-standing, salutary public policy goal of increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival. Public lands belong to the people and wildlife of America and should be safe havens for wildlife. Grizzly bears carry out a vital role in maintaining the balance of their ecosystems. The same cannot be said of "trophy hunters", essentially useless, idle, vain, unimaginative, persons engaged in trivial pursuits who can find no better way to occupy their too abundant time and money than killing beneficial animals. I urge the Governor's Grizzly Bear Advisory Council to reject the trophy hunting of grizzly bears.

People from all over the country and world go to Montana to see these wonderful animals, the Grizzly Bears. With less than 1,500 left in the 48 contiguous US, to allow anything but full protection of these magnificent creatures is horrible and sign of shortsightedness with nothing to be gain but a few hunter trophies. Idaho is already getting a bad reputation for hunting animals on the verge of extinction. Don't let Montana soon to follow. Do the right thing and leave the Grizzly Bears off your trophy hunters' lists.

No Trophy Hunting

The Great Bear is a quintessential symbol of Wilderness and wildness, especially in parts of the western United States and Alaska where the great bear still roams.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

I am entirely opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

Don't any of you realize that we must continue to protect our wild animals. God created them for a reason. They are a majestic and beautiful animal when alive. They are part of the natural balance. Human beings have disrupted enough of natures natural balance and continues to make deadly choices when dealing with nature and the enviornment. Do not allow trophy hunting. What is the joy of seeing a dead animal or having it's head or skin. What a challenge it must be to hunt down an animal with high powered rifle, scope and most likely a guide. This beautiful, majestic, animal was previously hunted to the brink of extinction. Do not let this happen again.

In the Twenty-first Century human beings should be evolved enough to have learned that killing sentient beings for sport is unconscionable. Even primitive humans didn't do that; they killed for food and hides for protective materials. And kowtowing to the Trump family doesn't clean blood off your hands. I suggest you consider doing the decent thing and continue to protect grizzlies.

Arrogant, monied idiots with big guns and tiny brains find hunting Grizzly bears a boost for their fragile egos. Of course, they can only kill for their own pleasure and each animal's death take that animal out of existence forever. No matter how much the license and fee's bring into Montana's coffers, that is it. Living Grizzly bring in far more in continuous income to the state over the longer life of each living bear. I don't come to Montana to see dead Grizzly and I certainly don't come to Montana to see some arrogant bastard brag about what a great brave white hunter he is. Most folks come to Montana to see living creatures. If I want to see some arrogant jackass braying at the world I can watch the idiot from Mar-a-Lago parading around with his ego hanging out. No Grizzlies need to die for a damned brag.

The Great Bear is a quintessential symbol of Wilderness and wildness, especially in parts of the western United States and Alaska where the great bear still roams.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

Respectfully, I feel all animals, including apex predators such as grizzly bears, play important roles in their local ecological systems. A critical balance must be struck between all flora and fauna to insure survival. We are positive they all survived together well before man arrived and began deciding which animals and plants were an inconvenience to him, his property or business. As to trophy hunting, if you're not eating what you're killing, then you are just killing. So, what does that make you, a hunter or a killer?

I am writing to oppose the idea of trophy hunting of Grizzly Bears once they are removed from the Endangered Species List. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing them to recover from having once almost been hunted to extinction. Thank you.

As frequent visitors to Montana's many natural wonders and communities that we support with our purchases of goods and services, we are entirely opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival. It is vitally important that people create space and safety for a recovery of the grizzly population. Thank you!

I know that the Endangered Species Act was really helpful in pushing grizzlies back from the brink. They're keystone species and, as such, they play a vital role that is proportionately greater than one might expect. Please give them a chance to further establish themselves throughout the wildlife corridors of Montana and the Rockies before offering trophy hunts. I no longer live in Montana, but they are part of the ethos there for sure, and I hope that they can be enabled to further reestablish themselves.
Thank you for your consideration,

Please do not allow trophy hunting for grizzly bears! Trophy hunting is not ethical, nor is it healthy for the bear population and the surrounding ecosystem. People come to Montana to view wildlife and most of them respect the place bears have in their natural habitat. The last thing they want to see is a hunter shooting a magnificent bear in front of them. If this is allowed, tourism will drop in your state which will have a detrimental affect on your economy.

Do not allow trophy hunting of grizzly bears.

There are only an about 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range.

They have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

I worked three summers at Denali National Park (then Mt McKinley NP) starting in 1972 (when I graduated HS) and had many opportunities to watch grizzly bears then and in return visits as an adult. Trophy hunting is big business and barbaric. Leave these majestic animals alone or manage them in a sensitive manner. BTW, I recall talking to a "hunter" from a military base near Fairbanks who had set up a bait station with grocery store donuts and managed to kill a grizzly. Not exactly sporting, and dangerous for the rest of us who are just walking through the woods--if grizzlies associate us with food!

I adamantly opposed to efforts to allow trophy hunting of Grizzly Bears! Grizzly bears are endangered and they are protected under the Endangered Species Act. While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana. Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

Trophy hunting is a irresponsible, cruel, and pointless endeavor and should never be encouraged by Government officials. A biologically diverse ecosystem is the foundation for a healthy environment. When animals are driven to extinction by human activity, we destabilize the environment and make our planet less healthy, and less resilient to environmental stressors.

I urge the state of Montana to abandon this effort to allow trophy hunting of Grizzly Bears.

Please don't feed whatever strange need people have to kill. Trophy hunting is a sick endeavor which people need to stop and get their jollies elsewhere. These grizzly bear struggle in an already human spread, losing their ability to thrive in their natural habitat. There is never a good reason to needlessly take a life. We have become a plague on this planet, spreading our pollution and concrete to every inch we can destroy. Please, don't allow this killing to take place. Animal trophies are an abomination. Leave these animals alone to live in peace, not to satisfy some person's sick fantasy. Or make them hunt with a knife. That's hunting, not with some high powered rifle that anyone can learn to shoot. It's just sick.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

If trophy hunting were to be allowed by the state of Montana, iconic Wilderness areas in Montana like the Bob Marshall, Great Bear, Scapegoat, Lee Metcalf, Absaroka-Beartooth, and Cabinet Mountains Wilderness would no longer be safe havens for the Great Bear.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

Grizzly-bear recovery is still incomplete and uncertain. After potential delisting, especially considering ecological changes due to climate change, careful management practices will be required to avoid regression back into endangered status. Trophy hunting on public lands, notably wilderness areas and national parks, is complexly inconsistent with responsible management of the species.

Please oppose any proposals for trophy hunting of the grizzly bear.

Grizzlies are God's creatures and have just as much right to live on this Earth as we do. They are also an important part of an eco-system and killing them can have a major impact causing many other problems. Grizzlies were at one time a very endangered species, particularly in areas like Montana. People should not have the right to destroy these beautiful creatures. The point of maintaining a wilderness area is so that it remains in its natural environmental condition. These hunters are just killers! They just want the thrill of finding and killing these creatures for sport and bragging rights. This is not natural. This is not fair. This is not right. Allow this species to live in peace. Don't allow trophy hunting.

Hello ~to whom it may concern~
Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.
Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.
Thank you for your consideration,
Eve Danner Lentz

Please do not allow Grizzly Bear trophy hunting in Montana. These magnificent creatures, part of Nature's ecosystem, need to be treated with the respect due all Mother Nature, of which our species is but one element. Please use the authority of your position to protect the Grizzly from the unnecessary, ill-advised, trophy-seeking activity. Our human energies are better spent elsewhere. Thank you. I urge you not to open up trophy hunting of grizzly bears in Montana upon de-listing from the ESA. Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Allowing trophy hunting runs counter to the very essence of increasing grizzly bear numbers. On Earth Day, I implore you to consider the ramifications of opening up this heinous act and what it could do, not only to the grizzly bear population, but on the beautiful landscape of Montana.

Thank you for your consideration in this matter.

Stop hunting for wildlife! Leave them alone and let them live in peace! If people want to shoot, then go to a shooting range, put a stuffed animal by the target, shoot it and there you have it, you now have proved your masculinity! Stop hunting for all reasons, but mainly stop hunting to bump up your egos and simply because you have the right to do so! Animals have rights as well and one of them is to live just like your! Wouldn't feel to happy of someone started hunting your family now would you?!

I oppose allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Grizzlies were nearly gone from the lower 48 states in 1975. Listing them for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA) has been somewhat effective in the 40+ years since that listing. However, grizzlies are only found in 2% if their historic range and they have very low reproductive rates. De-listing them from the ESA and then allowing trophy hunting would be a travesty to their survival. Please do not allow trophy hunting of grizzly bears.

There are only 1500 grizzlies in the wild, and that is only 2% of what there used to be. These animals are a keystone species and their population should be allowed to change with their ecosystem not because some trophy hunter wants another head on their wall. It is abominable that, in the 21st century with the world facing a climate disaster, there are still people who so devalue life that they would kill a living being for a thrill or so-called trophy.

Please enter your comments for the Governor's Grizzly Bear Advisory Council:

The Montana Grizzly Bear Advisory Council should not permit hunting of grizzly bears. The grizzly bear is a quintessential symbol of Wilderness and wildness. In the last two years there have been record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana. Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. If trophy hunting was allowed by the state of Montana, iconic Wilderness areas in Montana like the Bob Marshall, Great Bear, Scapegoat, Lee Metcalf, Absaroka-Beartooth, and Cabinet Mountains Wilderness would no longer be safe havens for the Great Bear. Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

I am totally against the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

Please listen to reason and do not allow this inhumane and ill-conceived plan to be put into effect. Thank you.

Alternatively to hunting grizzlies, ranchers could submit photos of grizzly kills encoded with time and GPS coordinates to be compensated by local or State agencies. Of course this overlooks the fact that Americans eat an unhealthy amount of red meat to begin with and the grizzlies are really helping us eat less by thinning the herd. Obesity is a symptom of disease waiting to happen.

I do not think grizzly bears should be hunted in Montana. They are an iconic species and pose little risk to humans and farms. Millions of tourists flock to Montana every year to experience the natural beauty of the state and grizzly bears are a big part of that. We should not allow them to be hunted unless they have injured/killed a person or have repeatedly killed livestock.

While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana. Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival. I strongly urge you to not approve any hunting of grizzly bears in MT. These great animals are already struggling for survival as we continuously encroach on their habitat. They are an iconic species, and deserve to be admired from a distance while enjoying their wilderness homes, not trapped in zoos or adorning the walls of "sportsmen" hunters. LEAVE THE GRIZZLIES ALONE! They will regulate their own numbers as Nature intended!

Should wealthy wannabe trophy hunters really be permitted to gun down an animal just because they want to? You want to make it a sport, give the bears rifles with high power scopes too.

Please do not consider opening up trophy hunting of Grizzly bears, when and if they are delisted from the ESA. De-listing will not mean they are not endangered, and do not deserve to live and fulfill their place in the wilderness.
Bears do not exist for the pleasure of those who find killing them to be fun. I don't understand these people, or why killing is so pleasant for them, but the bears are very few in numbers and deserve to live unthreatened by humans. There is no rational reason why the few extant bears must be slaughtered to please a few persons' blood lust.

TO:
State of Montana's Grizzly Bear Advisory Council
I am ENTIRELY OPPOSED TO THE AWFUL BARBARIC IDEA OF TROPHY HUNTING OF GRIZZLY BEARS IN MT OR ANYWHERE

ALLOWING TROPHY HUNTERS (MACHO COWARDS) TO SHOOT/KILL GRIZZLY BEARS, INCLUDING deep WITHIN Wilderness areas, RUNS CONTRARY to increasing grizzly bear numbers and ALLOWING the Great Bear to recover and REOCCUPY CRITICAL HABITAT THAT IS ESSENTIAL FOR THEIR SURVIVAL. THIS IDEA IS UNACCEPTABLE.

THE TROPHY HUNTERS HAVE NO COMPASSION FOR THESE MAGNIFICENT ANIMALS, JUST MORE KILLING AND VIOLENCE AGAINST INNOCENT ANIMALS, RESULTING IN BREAKING UP FAMILIES CREATING ORPHANS WITHOUT THEIR PARENTS. CRUEL, UNJUST, MACHO EGOS DRIVEN TO HAVE AN ANIMAL TROPHY IS BARBARIC, SELFISH AND DISGUSTING. DO NOT ALLOW THIS GRIZZLY BEAR TO TAKE PLACE AND PROCEED.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

As a resident of Clark, WY, a community on the edge of Yellowstone Park, I value a healthy and sizable population of grizzly bears in ten wild in and outside the Park. There are several studies that show the grizzly population is still on the upswing of recovery and building interspersed populations that have not yet gained the ability to intermix, which will enhance the genetic diversity and viability of the species. Please do not authorize a premature grizzly hunting season under the guise of population control.

As a former resident of Dillon and an lover of Montana in general, I am highly disturbed that you may be considering any hunting of our Grizzly Bears. These bears have had a rough go for several years and their population has been decimated by hunting and alarmist ranchers. Grizzlies are slow to reproduce and hunting would further harm their reproduction rate. You have allowed Grizzly hunts before and reduced their numbers dramatically. Having Grizzlies is good for the environment and important for the animal world. I am asking you not to allow any further hunting even if the ESA does delist them. Please allow your Montana Grizzly Bears to thrive without interference. In fact, as a State you have an obligation to do so. If you fail to do so, we won't have any Grizzly Bears and these iconic and much revered bears will have no homes and their numbers will dwindle into oblivion. Please take good care of these bears, they deserve your careful attention.

Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.
Leave the wild be. We have exploited it enough.

Even though the grizzly bear is still protected by the ESA, the state of Montana is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed from the ESA. Trophy hunting of grizzly bears would be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America's National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.

I do not agree with a hunting season for grizzly bears if delisted. there is too much uncertainty in our country to start a new unknown policy or perhaps reckless policy regarding this major wild animal. Protection and projection of future conservation should be our policies in this country where humans and wildlife are concerned. Let us consider what we are leaving as an example to future generations. Even President Nixon did the right thing with the ESA for OUR benefit.

Please do NOT allow trophy hunting!

Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to the very definition of Wilderness areas.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

One a selfish note, I would like continuing to visit Montana, but I won't if your state policy allows this.

Dear Council members,

I am hoping that you will not allow trophy hunting for grizzlies. I have never understood this mentality and just so you are aware I grew up eating wild game as my father was an avid hunter. The difference is we ate what my father killed. Hunting is for putting food on the table not putting an animal head on your wall to prove, I don't know what. My father and his brothers never understood this trophy hunting mentality and I follow in their footsteps.
We as a species have simply encroached on every place these animals call home and I am hoping that the beautiful state of Montana will allow at least some wilderness area where these animals can live as God meant them to.

Thank you for letting me voice my opinions and I look forward to your council doing what is the right thing for grizzlies, and all wildlife in Montana....

I understand that the Grizzly bear has been given the Latin name of Ursus arctos horribilis. However, this animal is the top of the food chain in North America and plays a pivotal part in maintaining ecological equilibrium. To remove the linchpin of any ecosystem is damning. Let's preserve our natural ecosystems for everyone's benefit.

Please do NOT allow trophy hunting of grizzly bears - they have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana. Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states. In 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act. Today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

Please, State of Montana’s Grizzly Bear Advisory Council, I am entirely opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

Please have some empathy for the animals we share this earth with.

I am greatly alarmed by your proposal to allow trophy hunting of grizzly bears on public lands, including wild lands. Today there are only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies left and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by many encroaching outside factors. In the last two years there were more grizzly deaths in Montana than ever before..
If trophy hunting were allowed by the state of Montana, the wilderness areas in Montana would no longer be safe havens for this bear. Grizzlies are a keystone species that helps shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions. This benefits the entire ecology of their terrain and the preservation of the natural environment.

Stay Home, Stop Hunting. Let the ecosystems of this planet live without constant human pressure from hunting, pollution, harassment and meddling. Grizzly Bears are imperative to a healthy planet and forest system. There is no need to kill them!

Can you please pass laws that requires hunting to be restricted to sustenance only? Ban all trophy hunting, and allow people to hunt deer, elk and black bear for meat only. Limit the licenses to a rational number for those wanting wild meat and the natural act of hunting for FOOD!

Pretty simple and natural. Everyone, even vegans, can get behind that basic law and guidelines.

Just do it.

Even though the grizzly bear is still protected by the ESA, the state of Montana is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed from the ESA. Trophy hunting of grizzly bears would be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America's National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.

Speak up for Grizzly Bears!

The grizzly bear is not only featured on Wilderness Watch’s logo, but the Great Bear is a quintessential symbol of Wilderness and wildness, especially in parts of the western United States and Alaska where the great bear still roams.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Even though the grizzly bear is still protected by the ESA, the state of Montana is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed from the ESA. Trophy hunting of grizzly bears would be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America’s National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. NO TROPHY HUNTING

Have spent a fair amount of time near grizzly bears in Alaska and have learned a great deal about them. They are grand creatures worthy of our respect. That so-called hunters would shoot them for sport is an offense of a really low moral order. As Dan Haggerty said when when a wealthy "hunter" proudly showed him his trophy room that included the mounted head of a large grizzly: "Any jackass can shoot a grizzly..

Please focus on the Covid 19 battle. There is no evidence of a bear passing the virus on to a human being. If that were so, maybe it would be a fair way for the bears to protect themselves from hunters because bears do not carry guns and therefore cannot shoot back. I don't think anyone has found a stuffed and mounted hunter's head or a hunter's skin rug in a bear den. Since that is not so, humans have to protect the bears from humans by working through government agencies. Please do not promote trophy hunting of Grizzlies.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Hunting is not sport it is killing of wildlife that cannot fight back. Killers should get jail time not trophies.
Killers try to come up with all excuses to destroy their targets; that is what they do. Such evil, arrogant and destructive actions should not be supported or tolerated.
We should find a way to coexist with wildlife not destroy it. Human race is not only living creatures on this planet. Stop destroying something that cannot fight back cowardly already.

Like many others, I am concerned about the practice of hunting grizzly bears. They are an essential part of wilderness. Hunting them is a terrifying experience for the bears and deeply impacts the family group and health of the species. Surely, as human beings, we can appreciate the need for the right of other species to live and to thrive.

I am entirely opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

Hello, let me begin by noting that humans ongoing encroachment into the habitat of other creatures creates conflict. To choose the side of humans over other beings does nothing to ensure an ecological balance is maintained. We are all part of a delicate balance which is teetering at the moment unless we change past behavior. The presence of the bear is more significant to balance than are human interests. Look to facts, review the objective studies that gave been done. Bears have a far ranging positive impact. Thank you, Michael

As an apex predator, Grizzly Bears should be protected, not hunted for sport or trophy. Do you understand the crucial role of an apex predator? That taking an apex predator out of the ecosystem completely changes it for the worst? That the rest of the ecosystem is thrown out of balance? That this also greatly negatively affects both Farmer Crops and Agriculture, as well as Livestock Grazing? In part because grizzly bears keep the amount of coyotes and wolves in check. Grizzly bears also leave carcasses that many other animals and birds feed on. So if they don't have that to eat, then they seek other sources of food, and this would include livestock animals.
This isn't just my opinion, it's also what Fish and Game will tell you. Please, consider the facts and do not Allow either sport or trophy hunting of Grizzly Bears in Montana. Also, many people travel as tourists to Montana in the hope of being able to see Grizzly Bears in the wild. Thank you for your consideration of my comments and thoughts.

In short, my family and I are totally opposed to Grizzly Bear hunting. The grizzly bear is a keystone of the last of America's truly wild places and hunting them is an assault on our wilderness heritage. There is no scientifically supported plan that allows for the trophy hunting of grizzly bears AND the goals of population recover. MY FAMILY AND I STAND MOST STRONGLY OPPOSED TO GRIZZLE BEAR TROPHY HUNTING.

To Whom It May Concern:

Even though the grizzly bear is still protected by the ESA, the state of Montana is considering allowing trophy hunting of grizzlies once they are de-listed from the ESA. Trophy hunting of grizzly bears would be allowed on public lands, including wild lands within America's National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

Sincerely,

Josh Cupriks

I am not an expert, but it seems to me that the grizzly does just fine maintaining its numbers and not exceeding its numbers within the wild habitat it resides. I don't see any need for humans to go in and shoot a few for their own personal satisfaction, when it is not biologically necessary to thin The herd, nor to obtain food. Thank you for hearing my comment. I support gun rights and hunters rights, and still hold this position.

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states, and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have extremely low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related “control” actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Even though the grizzly bear is currently protected by the ESA in the state of Montana, de-listing from the ESA will allow trophy hunting of grizzly bears on public lands, including wild lands within America’s National Wilderness Preservation System and wild public lands immediately adjacent to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks.

If trophy hunting is allowed by the state of Montana, iconic Wilderness areas in Montana like the Bob Marshall, Great Bear, Scapegoat, Lee Metcalf, Absaroka-Beartooth, and Cabinet Mountains Wilderness would no longer be safe havens for this great bear.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live. Conservation of vital habitat and restoration of public lands is a sounder approach to managing wildlife species.

Thank you for the opportunity to speak up on behalf of the grizzly bear population in Montana, and state my opposition to any changes in their Endangered Species Act classification status.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

I am entirely opposed to the idea of allowing trophy hunting of grizzly bears. Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

I am considering travel to Montana , primarily to its parks, where I hope to see wildlife. If Montana permits the trophy hunting of Grizzlies, I will not come to Montana and I'll encourage others to do the same.

I would like to voice my opposition to your proposed trophy hunting. Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

People and tourists come to Montana to experience the wilderness. Let's keep Montana's precious wild places and animals!

Grizzly bears were once pushed to the brink of extinction in the lower 48 states, so in 1975 they were listed for protection under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). While some progress has been made over the past 40-plus years to recover grizzly bear populations, today there are still only an estimated 1,500 grizzlies in the contiguous 48 states and they are found within less than 2 percent of their historic range. Grizzly bears have very low reproductive rates and continue to face excessive death rates caused by cars, trains, hunters claiming self-defense, poaching, livestock-related "control" actions, and other heavy-handed management. In fact, the last two years have seen record-breaking grizzly deaths in Montana.

Grizzlies are keystone species that help shape the ecosystems in which they live. Their numbers should be allowed to fluctuate according to habitat conditions, not some human-conceived population limit. Where grizzlies thrive, so will the wild places in which they live.

Allowing trophy hunters to shoot grizzly bears, including deep within Wilderness areas, runs contrary to increasing grizzly bear numbers and allowing the Great Bear to recover and reoccupy critical habitat essential for their survival.

The killing of animals to gain a "trophy" is an antiquated practice that is dangerous and to the planet.
