POSITION DESCRIPTION:

Intern will assist FWP biologists with various tasks associated with game and non-game wildlife management. The successful candidate will be expected to communicate with private land owners in a professional manner. This position will provide the opportunity for a motivated student to learn and apply a variety of field techniques which may include trapping, handling, recording data and identification of small mammals, reptiles and amphibians, radio telemetry tracking of tagged turtles, various bird survey methods, aquatic and terrestrial habitat assessments and maintenance work on Wildlife Management Areas. Multiple day backpacking trips in the Beartooth mountains may be required several times throughout the summer and the intern will be responsible for providing their own backpacking gear and supplies for alpine camping. This position will also require some data entry responsibilities using Access, Excel and ArcGIS and use of a handheld GPS and digital maps to navigate to field sites.

SKILLS, ABILITIES, KNOWLEDGE NEEDED (EDUCATION; UNDERGRAD/GRAD LEVEL, SUGGESTED/REQUIRED MAJORS):

Applicants must be currently enrolled in an accredited university or college program. This includes all public, private, community, vo-tech, and Native American institutions of higher learning. Preference will be given to those individuals enrolled in a program with wildlife biology, wildlife management, ecology, zoology, or closely related field.

Successful applicant will be detail-oriented, organized, able to follow oral and written directions accurately and work well independently and as part of a team. Applicants must be physically fit, able to hike long distances carrying a heavy pack and able to work safely and comfortably in adverse weather, buggy conditions and bear/moose country.
