I am in full support of game damage quotas for elk. I am not sure of game damage hunts for mule deer and antelope due to recent drought and winter conditions that have reduced numbers. I recommend in the future to separate mule deer and white-tailed deer game damage quotas, with a major focus on WT.

I don't see any category for grizzly damage control. These grizzly need to be thinned out, there are far to many of them out there now. I shot a 6x6 bull elk on opening day & after tracking it down the mountain we found a grizzly had claimed it it the creek bed. Maybe I should've just shot the bear & said it charged me. I won't let another grizzly take another elk from me again. These grizzlies need to be put into check!!!!

I believe this is something the FWP and their biologists are more than capable of handling. I trust the FWPs decisions on this matter.

Shoulder season simply should include state and federal lands....We're creating artificial refuges for elk by not allowing hunting...Perhaps consider allowing hunting on the WMA's for first month of shoulder season , then close for the late winter to give the elk the respite they get on the WMA's...the current structure isn't working and I have quit the shoulder seasons entirely..

second and third choices on HD choices on the hunt roster would help hunters as some are oversubscribed and some are under subscribed...this would give more opportunity to hunter not to miss out on a species just because of sign up numbers
